We support parents and adult to become role models

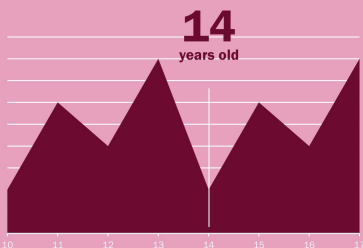

The STEPin project aims to support parents in becoming role models and motivators for their children for using their time online in a sensible and constructive way. The goal is to empower them with knowledge, skills and tools so that they are able to recognise and deal with Internet Abusive Behaviour (IAB) and the dangers and consequences that come with it.

Needs and gaps of children and parents | North Macedonia

Parents

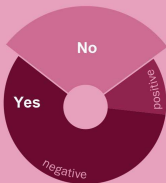

How old is your child?

How much time do your children spend on the internet per day/per week?

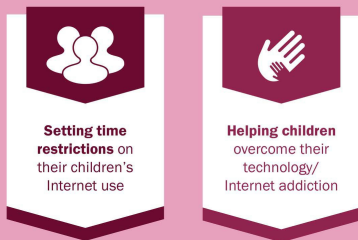

Do you/did you recognize any changes in your children's habits/behavior?

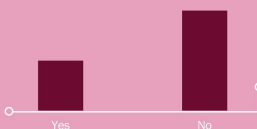

Interaction with peers is mainly online, children have lower interest in other types of activities, low concentration level as they are exposed to unprecedented amount of information, lack of communication with the other household members and lack of physical activity.

Challenges

Do you know any strategies?

Most of the parents are not familiar with strategies for dealing with their children's excessive online-time, and are interested in improving their knowledge in this field.

Parents and adult educators are generally not sufficiently familiar with the topic of Internet abusive behaviour, but and are interested in improving their knowledge in this field. They recognize the need for helping children overcome excessive Internet use and related challenges.
